THE DISTRIBUTION BILL—NO. 2.

I have stated the chief enormity of the Distribution Bill to consist in its attack upon that first and dearest principle of a free government, that the popular branch of the legislature should control the raising of the revenue, and the appropriation of it. It is as important that the raising of revenue, should be deposited in those hands, as that its appropriation should be. And this principle is so vital to a perfect liberty and independence, that it is not sufficient to preserve it inviolate, it should also be reverenced as one not to be attacked, nay, not be touched. It is a principle not to be preserved in its mangled remains, but in its whole form and proportion. It is a principle so sensitive, that when touched, it withers and becomes at once divested of life, or at least, of all vital action. It may be sufficient to some minds, it seems to me that it ought to be, merely to state this position, in order to have it fully acknowledged as an axiom not to be disputed, and also to have its application to this measure, fully perceived. As it is, however, so important in itself, and I have some fear that I may have stated it in the former number too briefly, to make it appreciated as I think it deserves, I shall enlarge somewhat further upon it at this time; and I think the more necessary, because there is a chance that some minds may hastily form the conclusion, that it is sufficient the House of Representatives have the control of the appropriation, and that it is not essential they should also have the raising of the revenue.

If the Constitution of the United States is so jealous of liberty as to forbid the reception of any present, however small, by any in its service from a foreign power; if it regards with dread, a mere sop offered to them, should it not be dreaded that we receive, not a mere sop, but our whole food and sustenance from another government? I put it to you, whether there is a meanness in so doing, because I take an objection to it on higher ground, and because, as I have before intimated, I mean to pass over all objections that are not of the most grave and serious nature. There is an insane, a frenzied spirit of cupidity excited throughout the land, seeking to lay its hand on the public revenue and the public domain; and the tone of the public press in this Commonwealth, compels me to speak to you as partakers of this spirit. It has raised its exulting cries, at the prospect of the slice to be dealt out to us, like the unrestrained triumph of a school boy, whose gratified covetousness seeks expression in all the varied modes which an eagerly sought, unexpected and highly prized acquisition suggests to his dazzled and deluded fancy. I must, therefore, address you as partakers of this spirit of cupidity; and as a friend, wishing to speak not wholly in vain, I should not oppose to such a powerful antagonist any frivolous objections. I shall present to you only such objections to the distribution bill, as to my mind make it appear no less than a mortal poison to our liberties. If taxing the people of the United States to divide the proceeds among the States, is a grievance; if the distribution of this fund to those States according to property, (as it has been made in the Slave-holding States,) and not according to population is a grievance; or if the reception of it is derogatory to the character of a great and free State; or if the country needs and suffers for the expenditure of the money on fortifications, navy, and public works, these and many other as weighty reasons against it, are all light as a feather, 'as dew upon the flower,' in comparison with any real danger to our liberty.

From the time when liberty began to show her head in England, certainly as long ago as the planting of this country, the principle was asserted, yes and strenuously and nobly maintained, that the public revenue should be raised by the popular branch of the legislative department of the government. It has been from that day to this, and will be to the last day of time, considered the chief check in the hands of that branch of the government. It is no answer to say that the exercise of this check is not now or ever will be needed. If the possession of it is important, then it is the part of fully to suffer it to be lost for "so much treasure as may be grasped thus."

Every reader of English history, and that is every reading man among us, knows with what vigilant jealousy the commons have guarded, and in how many well-maintained contests they have defended this principle. I will not now, therefore, recapitulate them. In relation hereto, a well known and celebrated writer on the English constitution says, "they never suffer any money bill to begin any where but with themselves. If the commons had not most strictly reserved to themselves the exercise of a prerogative on which their very existence depends, the whole might have slipped into the other body, &c. If any other persons, besides the representatives of the people had a right to make an offer of the produce of the labor of the people the Executive would soon have forgot that it only exists for the advantage of the public." And the same writer repeats, "their very being depends on granting subsidies to the crown." The analogy, to be sure, is not perfect, between our government and that of England, but liberty consists in the same principles.

Col. Burr was right. Those possessing this species of memory have the perceptive powers of individuality and eventually large or active, and exercise them much, and the repetitive powers of comparison and causality small or inactive, and exercise them but little. Such people have a memory for details only and not for principles or combinations.—Phil. Leg.

Chess Playing the Foundation of Virtue.—A correspondent of the Montreal Gazette proves that playing at chess brings into exercise habits of order, close attention, circumspection, caution, patience, perseverance, good temper, and contentment with small gains; and exactly in the measure that these qualities are brought to the game, is the playing good.

DON'T KEEP YOUR ASHES IN WOODEN VESSELS.—Those persons that are in the habit of keeping their ashes in wooden vessels, are informed that boxes and barrels are no longer indispensable for that purpose, as we have for sale Ashpails so very convenient and economical that the whole cost of them will be saved in a month, as they combine the coal hole, the ashfule, the sifter and the poll.

INDIGESTION, JAUNDICE AND BILIOUS COMPLAINTS.

ANDERSON'S VEGETABLE ELIXIR, for Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Jaundice and Bilious Complaints of the Stomach and Bowels, and consequent Loss of appetite, nervous complaints, headache, sour stomach, flatulence and habitual costiveness.

This medicine is composed entirely of vegetable substances perfectly safe in its operation, and may be given to children or persons of the most delicate habit, without the least risk of inconvenience.

The uniform success which has attended the use of it where it has been extensively used, in Boston and various other parts of the United States, and in the West Indies, attested by distinguished and highly respectable persons, affords next to a trial of the medicine itself, the best commentary upon its virtues, and the kind of relief which can be offered to those who are unacquainted with it.

Extract of a letter received from a gentleman in Boston, who had suffered severely from indigestion for three years. “During this time, I suffered very much from mental depression, constant pain in the head and breast, and side, sharp shooting pain over almost the whole system—the food that I ate seemed to pass into my lungs and there remain, giving me great pain as well as from the pain of indigestion as to be confined to the bed for two or three days. During one of these most severe attacks I was induced by the advice of a friend to try your Vegetable Medicine. In two or three weeks I found myself much better, and by the time I had two bottles, considered myself wholly free from the complaint. I continue, on the least feeling of any thing like indigestion or flatulence in the stomach, to take about a table spoonful of it, which in the course of a few hours completely restores me. It has had with me a very wonderful effect, in strengthening the stomach and invigorating the whole system, and judging by my own case, I consider it in all diseases connected with the digestive organs, to be a very valuable medicine.

It has been found singularly efficacious in cases of the most obstinate headache.

It is put up in large bottles containing a pound and a half, and sold at seventy-five cents each, by Jonathan P. Hall, Jr. No. 1, Union Street, Boston, P. Whitelock, Milk street, John L. Brown, near Boston Market, Erastus S. Holden, near the Western Avenue, Richard A. Newell, Summer street, Boston, Samuel Kidder & Co., Charlestown, E. G. Lemon, Roxbury, &c.

LIGHTNING CONDUCTORS.

DR. KING, continues to prepare and affix his improved lightning conductors—they are approved by all practical Electricians as affording superior protection against lightning to the old round form. Numbers of scientific gentlemen in Boston and its vicinity, have had them affixed by him to their Mansions and other buildings, among them he will name those of President Quincy, Professor Webster and Popkin of Harvard University, Governor Lincoln of Worcester. They were likewise highly recommended by Professor Silliman in his much esteemed lectures on Chemistry, delivered in Boston.

Gentlemen intending to have conductors are invited to his room No 54 Cornhill, Boston, where they may see the effect of his rods illustrated.

He continues to manufacture and has on hand large plate Electrical machines of superior power, also astatic & lightning—large and small Galvanic batteries, Electro Magnets and their apparatus—warranted of the best workmanship. He lately constructed for Professor Silliman the largest Galvanic Deflagrator ever made. Gentlemen arriving in Boston to purchase such articles, would do well to call before him.

Music bound and Pianofortes tuned.
